

America's Most Important Natural Resource

America is a country of vast natural resources, the most important of which is the American people. Normally, the riches of a country are tallied by what can be mined, shipped, stripped, pumped, cut or otherwise, wrestled from the earth in some manner. Because humans possess the capacity for thought and the capacity to produce labor (as a product of thought), humans are far and away the most valuable resource on the planet. And, not only are humans renewable resources, generation upon generation, but when humans change their mind, which can happen in a twinkling of an eye, refine their focus or learn something new, their value, output and influence grows exponentially.

When allowed to flourish, humans are capable of stunning brilliance and a capacity to create that which is second only to Nature itself. When allowed to tap into their potential, without fear of reprisal or punishment, humanity is capable of startling possibilities and solutions. When aligned with certain innate principles, humanity, as the offspring of Nature, knows no bounds. In fact, humanity, through the resources of the mind and its connection with the Infinite, has no limits.

As Americans come to understand their true nature and their most valuable asset (themselves), only then can they become truly effective in a seemingly chaotic world. The voice of the people, unfettered by rules and regulations, with courage, heart and awareness of their similarities, befits the American heritage. The capacity to effectively influence the whole is simply a matter of knowing the difference between right and wrong and contributing in the most effective manner. And, lest we forget, America was founded on the inalienable right of the people to prosper and become their possibilities.

Only humans know what is important to humans. Only humans have a nervous system that can identify what is right for themselves and each other. Compare that to the artificial entity corporations (governmental, religious and traditional for-profit) sans nervous systems and driven by bottom-line profits and power, and we discover a second type of leadership on the planet. With the soulless and relatively ageless artificial entities as leaders, albeit, stand-ins for humans unwilling to make useful choices for themselves, does the plunder of the planet continue – for profit.

Master teachers (made of flesh and connected to the cosmos by their nervous systems) taught about Unconditional Love as the solution to all problems. Why Unconditional Love? Ultimately, because Love (acceptance) is the connection that everything shares – an unfolding that is ever in symmetry, harmony and resonance with everything else. The opposite of love is resistance and resistance is a powerful disconnection and dissonance with the over-all whole. Unconditional Love allows us to meld into the whole and expand into our possibilities. As the American people begin to understand that what we focus on expands, what we resist persists, and what we fight for or against or attempt to force, we engender our limitations.

For example, how many of us know that by our gaze, by our review of what is before us, we contribute to its existence? How many understand that by our connection with the cosmos, we bring life to what we observe? Ever watch a parade or a football game? What would be its life and success without the spectators – without the observers? World events are no different. By the contribution of our life force demonstrated as feelings of distress or joy, sadness or concern, we contribute to mass mind reality creation. This is known as unconscious consentience, a term coined during the writing of Visionaries Thrive In All Times – and an unconscious contribution to mass mind reality creation

What would be a more useful perspective? Conscious consentience says that by the application of Unconditional Love applied to what we observe while holding a vision for its highest possibility and outcome, we are far more useful to the whole. By our intentionally shared connection with the cosmos through our capacity for perception, we each contribute in a far more useful manner to mass mind reality creation. We become visionaries!

Who are the leaders? The humans are the leaders. What are the tools of the leaders? Nervous systems with conscious connection to the symmetry, harmony and resonance of a perfectly unfolding Universe, and choice of alignment to our highest good – the good of all. And, an awareness that Unconditional Love is an ideal replacement for an inadvertent perspective that generates less than its possibility.

Conscious consentience is a conscious series of choices made from a perspective of love aligned with the forces of the Universe and all-powerful in the hands of individuals aligned with what is true. Out of the contrast of chaotic times, the American people have it well within their grasp to become effective leaders on the planet, individually and collectively. Solutions are but an unconditionally collective thought away.
